Coming home, what it changed, and finding your soldier

Name: _____

How did Gallipoli end, what did it cost, and what did it change for New Zealand?

How did it end?

Between 15 and 20 December 1915, the soldiers left Anzac at night. They set up drip rifles: water dripped into a tin until it was heavy enough to pull the trigger.

Why did the leaving work so much better than the landing?

_____

_____

The cost

2,779 New Zealanders died at Gallipoli. About 18,000 died in the whole war. Most families and towns lost someone.

Name one way the war changed New Zealand:

Find your soldier

Search for the man from our class roll (or one from your town) at theanzacs.co.nz. Fill in his card.

His name
Rank and number
Unit
Troopship
Date he sailed
Fate (what happened)
Medals he was likely given
Where he rests

Tip: medals are worked out from his dates. If he sailed by the end of 1915, he was likely given the 1914-15 Star. Most men got the British War Medal and Victory Medal. If he died, his family got a Memorial Plaque.

One thing that surprised me

_____

Some of the men we find did not come home. If that is hard, tell your teacher and you can choose another soldier.
